COTTAGE CRAVING

Designer Jackie Armour's empty-nester clients had always wanted a cottage-style home and were fascinated by the Old Florida aesthetic. When they purchased a site along the Intracoastal in Jupiter, they saw it as their chance to design something with clean lines and a bright yet quaint feel.

"When you think of cottage decor, white often comes to mind," says Armour, head of JMA Interior Design. "The interiors of this living room have a white and neutral palette with natural elements, custom millwork, and light wood plank flooring throughout. We created depth and texture with the fabrics and wallcoverings as well as the utilization of metals."

While the room has an abundance of natural light during daylight hours, Armour incorporated an airy chandelier to play into the cottage vibe and add warmth in the evenings. And as a means of anchoring the space with a pop of color, she talked the homeowners into painting the door robin's-egg blue—the perfect inviting element to welcome visitors.
